Quality Assurance

Quality assurance is a wide-ranging concept which covers all matters that individually or collectively influence the quality of our products. It is the totality of the arrangements made to ensure that our products are of the quality required for its intended use. Our quality assurance therefore incorporates several factors and it is an integral part of all key activities in the procurement procedures. The implementation of a quality assurance system in procurement includes systems for prequalification, storage and distribution in which it affects our internal costs. However, the benefits of ensuring quality outweigh the cost investment because they reduce the possible losses caused by the purchase and supply of substandard products.

Prequalification of products and manufacturers, purchasing, storage and distribution are complex processes that may involve many offices, procurement agencies, sections or departments and several stages of administration, finance and technical decisions. The efficiency of the procedures depends in great part on the use of a proven method in a consistent manner. The use of a standard approach will ensure consistency in all activities involved in procurement of defined acceptable quality. This Model focuses on the following four key activities of procurement: prequalification of products and manufacturers; purchase of products; storage of products; and delivery of products.

Quality Control

Quality Control is the part of ATCC quality management system that ensures our building services complies with the requirements. It is the work methods that we develop which facilitates the measurements of the quality characteristics of a unit, compares them with the established standards, and analyze the differences between the obtained result to take a decision accordingly.

Technical specifications define the type of controls that must be carried out to ensure the construction works are carried out correctly. They include not only materials, but also the execution and completion of the works.

Our Way of controlling quality is based on the inspection or verification of our services. The aim is to make sure our product and our services are verified for perfection before handed over to the client, so that services or products that do not comply with requirements are discarded or repaired.
